

Clemenceau Receives Threatening Letter Today

EDUCATION WEEK FOR AMERICA IS
DECEMBER 3 TO 9

J. J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education, Commends Work of American Legion in Instituting Week.

SAYS NATION WILL STAND OR FALL ON SCHOOL SYSTEM

Washington, Nov. 22.—With American Education Week being initiated by the American Legion in a few days, December 3 to 9, John J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education, declares our nation will stand or fall with its school system. The article by Dr. Tigert follows, in part:

"The American Republic will stand or fall with its school system, James Madison asserted this in effect when he said: 'A popular government without popular information or means of acquiring it is but a prologue to a farce or a tragedy, or, perhaps both. Knowledge will forever govern ignorance, and a people who mean to be their own governors must arm themselves with the power which knowledge gives.'"

"We are justly proud of our universal free school system, no other nation has anything like it. While no boy or girl is denied education at public expense in America yet it must be confessed that the opportunities offered vary within the widest extremes. Some of our public schools cannot be excelled, others are so deplorably lacking as to be almost useless. It is our purpose to show briefly what some of these inequalities are.

"Whether we consider the sums expended upon public education, the training of teachers, the buildings and equipment, the length of the school term or other vital factors which determine the efficiency of schools, we are immediately struck with the startling diversity which now exists in the United States.

"This diversity in educational opportunity is apparent whether we are comparing equality of educational opportunity for children among the different States or of those living in different countries within the same state, or even in the districts within the same county. Indeed it often happens that the most obvious differences exist between children living in different districts in the same state and between those living in rural districts and those living in nearby, or even adjoining city territory."

WOMAN'S CLUB TO MAKE ROLL CALL

Members Start Monday To Raise Funds For Middlesboro Red Cross Budget.

The Woman's Club will put on the membership roll call drive in Middlesboro next week, beginning Monday, W. S. Anderson announced today. He says he feels much encouraged now over the outlook for financing the Red Cross for the coming year.

Eighteen hundred dollars has been raised for the work in Middlesboro up to the present date. Mr. Anderson expects roll call to show an increase in the amount by $1000. The total of $1800 will fall short of the set quota of $4500 by $1700. However, Mr. Anderson is quite hopeful and says the amount raised will carry on the work until next summer when he expects to make another drive to make up the deficit. In the summer he predicts that money will be more plentiful and subscriptions much more liberal.

The Red Cross work in Middlesboro is a community affair and Mr. Anderson says it must be carried on by the community as a whole and not by just a few individuals. He also says that if the Woman's club wishes any assistance it will be granted by the chairman or any of the executive committee willingly.

In view of the fact that the Woman's Club will take care of the Roll Call drive Mr. Anderson says there will be no call meeting Thursday of the executive committee to discuss dropping Red Cross work.

To Ask Permission For Legislature To Call Constitutional Convention.

By Associated Press
MANILA, Nov. 22.—President Harding and Congress will be asked to allow the Philippine legislature to call a constitutional convention to frame a future independent republic in the Philippines. This is the result of the adoption in the House today of the concurrent resolution passed by the Senate three weeks ago.

KNOXVILLE COLORED HIGH
BEATS LOCAL TEAM AGAIN

The Middlesboro colored high school football team was defeated 14 to 0 by Knoxville last Friday afternoon in the best game of the season. The game was full the thrills, both teams getting within five yards of the goal several times to lose the ball to the opposing side.

The high school team will play the Lynch school team next Friday at East End park, and the public's attendance is solicited at this time.

TWO CASES SETTLED IN CIRCUIT COURT TODAY

Two cases were settled in circuit court this morning. Charles Wilson of Middlesboro was fined $25 for assault and battery and H. Lambert of Middlesboro was fined $50 and given 30 days in jail for having liquor in his possession. The Green murder case will be taken up this afternoon.

MRS. MOLLIE SHARP DIES AT HOME OF SON MONDAY

Mrs. Mollie Sharp of near Speedwell died Monday at the home of her son, Dit Sharp, and was buried yesterday in the Sharp cemetery. She was 63 years old and was one of the best-known residents of that section. She had been ill only three days.

Mrs. Sharp is survived by four sons, Gideon, Dit, Grover and Alfred, and two daughters, Mrs. E. B. Farris of near Speedwell and Mrs. Mounts of Oklahoma.

SENATE TERM FOR
MRS. FELTON BRIEF

First Woman Senator Closes Career After 22 Hours Actual Service.

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Mrs. W. H. Felton, the first American woman Senator, closed her senatorial career today after answering once her name and making a brief address amid the applause of senators and spectators. Walter F. George then was sworn in and Mrs. Felton became a former senator after actual service of twenty-two hours.

Mrs. Felton said in her address that she felt like the happiest woman in the United States and added that she regarded her brief service as Senator as a "historical fact" as well as a "romantic incident." She spoke standing in the center aisle, emphasizing with gestures. She spoke somewhat hastily but clearly.

WOODROW WILSON—A SUCCESS OR A FAILURE?
NEW BRITISH BOOK STIRS WORLD BY QUESTION

BY MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Was Woodrow Wilson one of the greatest failures of history—or one of the greatest successes?

If a failure—was it due to circumstances he couldn't control? Should he not be named, nevertheless, among the few noble men of history?

An Englishman, Laurence Housman, poet, dramatist and novelist, undertakes to answer these questions in his book, "Definements," already published in London and soon to be issued in America.

The book contains imaginary portraits of famous men done in dialogue, and the picture Housman paints of Wilson out of words he places in the former president's mouth seems likely to make the silent man at Washington the center of a heated discussion.

Here is the picture—an imaginary dialogue between Wilson and his secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, immediately after President Harding's inauguration, March 4, 1921:

WILSON: Tumulty, I've failed.
TUMULTY (extenuatingly): In a way, yes. For a time.

WILSON: Absolutely.

WOODROW WILSON.

TUMULTY: I don't agree.
WILSON: Because you don't know my case was so strong—and I had such faith in it. . . too much faith, not in what I stood for, but in myself. It's a terrible thing when one sees and knows the truth so absolutely, but can not convince others. That's been my fate: to be so sure I was right, and yet to fail.

Housman makes Wilson say that he went to Paris "thinking to save the peace"—but that "they (the European statesmen) did not want justice done."

WILSON (continuing): I had the truth in me; but I failed. I was a voice crying in the void—a president without a people to back me; a dictator—of words, the heart of my people was not with me. If they had any doubt before, the vote of the Senate told them.

Wilson is pictured as saying that at the Paris peace conference he made two fatal mistakes:

Believing the statesmen would honor their pledged word, and allowing himself to be trapped into agreeing that the sessions be behind closed doors.

WILSON: He got me to agree to that. It was his first win.

TUMULTY: (Who do you mean by "he"?)

WILSON: (With a dry laugh.) The man who told me he was on my side.

"He" told Wilson, the dialogue says, that closed sessions would be an easy way to save the faces of those statesmen. "He" and Wilson were going to persuade to climb down—and then they got Wilson inside a room and voted three to one against him.

There are several scathing references to Lloyd George in the book, and many in England identify the mysterious "He" as the former premier.

Housman represents Wilson as saying—after ascribing his defeat to the old diplomacy—that he still had one powerful weapon left: To tell the world that the Allies had lost the peace because they would not give up the profit, revenge, "our own good opinion of ourselves, our own self-righteous judgment of others." He says he didn't because, amid the wreckage, he still saw something—the League of Nations.

WILSON (continuing): But in what hands have I had to leave it? To men who have no faith in it, to men who dislike it, to men who will try to turn it back to their own selfish ends. There, in those hands, its fate will lie—perhaps for a generation to come.

And it is only by faith in the common people, not in their politicians, that I dare look forward and hope that the instrument may yet become a mighty sword in the hands of a giant—of one whose balances are those of justice, not of power.

But I shan't see it; it won't be in my day. If America had come in, I should. And that was the keystone of my policy: that gone, my policy has failed.

JOSEPH P. TUMULTY.

FRANK CASSELL
DIES LAST NIGHT

Victim of Automobile Wreck Had Lived Here All His Life—Employed At Fork Ridge.

Frank Cassell, who was injured when his car turned over an embankment on the Yellow Creek road (Wednesday night, died at 11:30 last night at the Brosheer-Brummett Hospital where he had been since the accident. The funeral will be held at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. Neal Campbell, on Exeter avenue, Rev. A. B. Reeves will officiate. Pall bearers will be: Charles D. Collier, Robert Ralston, Matt Whitford, W. U. Oaks, Douglas Pollette and Frank Maxey.

Frank Cassell is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Len Cassell, one brother, Lee Cassell, and three sisters, Mrs. Neal Campbell, Mrs. H. C. Moore and Mrs. Lee Smith, all of Middlesboro.

He had lived in Middlesboro most of his life and was 31 years old at the time of his death. He was a favorite with all who knew him. For nine years he was employed at the commissary at Fork Ridge.

Previous to that time he was with the W. J. Callison store. Both his work and his character are praised highly by both concerns. Chas. Collier of the Fork Ridge Commissary says Cassell was exceptionally bright and his work was perfectly performed.

During the war he was with the 113th Machine Gun battalion of the 38th division. He was badly wounded in the drive on the Hindenburg line and was in a hospital in England for over five months.

MINIATURE CHART OF FOOTBALL FIELD

Pineville Shows Enthusiastic Interest Over Turkey Day Game Here November 29.

PINEVILLE, Nov. 22.—An attractive idea, conceived and executed by Bob Davis, and displayed in a show window of the Phillips and Patterson hardware is a chart of the Middlesboro gridiron where the annual Thanksgiving football battle between Pineville and Middlesboro will take place on November 29.

The chart shows exact distances with yard lines, goal posts and everything. The players are represented by peanut warriors, with tooth-pick legs and split-gooben feet. The Pineville boys are attired in water-color jerseys of maroon while the Middlesboro peanut players are flaunting their famed yellow jackets.

Robert Hinton of Georgetown College who will referee the game jauntily sports a white sweater.

The miniature teams are in position, ready for the kickoff, with a peanut pignskin holding the center of the stage.

The chart shows the new arrangement for box seats inside the lines, most of them already sold.

Pineville backs her football team with faith and enthusiasm, and all the fans will be there to watch the season close. The change from Thursday to Wednesday is very acceptable, because of the number of Pineville people going to Knoxville for the Thanksgiving game.

The game will be called Wednesday, November 29 at 2 o'clock on the Middlesboro field. "Doc" Rodes of Kentucky State, is umpire, and Robert Hinton, Georgetown College, referee. The head linesman from Knoxville has not yet been selected.

KIWANIS PLAN BIG TIME FOR LADIES NIGHT

The Kiwanis Club is making extensive plans for Ladies' Night tomorrow night, the first to be held in the Hotel Cumberland. The committee has guaranteed an attendance of 125 at this time and has arranged an excellent program. E. P. Nicholson is chairman for the evening. Ladies' Night had not been held for several months because there was no place for it.

Speakers for the evening will be Hugh Stephens of the Bankers-Trust Co. of Knoxville, and Dr. J. W. Porter of Louisville who won so much applause when he spoke to Kiwanis Club last Thursday. The Kiwanis Quartette will sing two selections.

Ten ladies' prizes will be given by the following men in order: Dr. L. L. Robertson, Dr. C. K. Brosheer, Dr. Jacob Scholtz, Dr. J. P. Edmunds, Dr. U. G. Brummett, Dr. T. E. Card, Dr. T. T. Gibson, Dr. O. O. Stone, Dr. T. D. Yankirk and Dr. E. L. Camp.

WOMAN IS RUN
OVER BY TRUCK

Mrs. Haven Severely Injured When F. P. Scales Truck Strikes Her Last Night.

Mrs. Abner Haven was severely injured about 8 o'clock last night when an F. P. Scales truck ran into her as she was crossing Nineteenth street on her way home. Oates Rabe was driving the truck. Late this afternoon she was reported resting much better at the Brosheer-Brummett hospital.

Her head was injured when it struck the pavement as she fell in front of the truck. She suffered last night from a hemorrhage in the ear. As yet no X-ray examination has been made for internal injuries but from all appearances Mrs. Haven will rapidly improve.

She was on her way home from work at the Big Ben factory where she is employed as inspector. The truck struck her as she was crossing the street in front of the Booker T. Washington hospital. Her clothing was torn into strips but only a few scratches were evident on her body.

Dr. U. G. Brummett expressed himself this afternoon as being quite hopeful for her complete recovery.

Mrs. Fannie Breeze, a relative of Mrs. Haven's, says she cannot understand how the accident occurred as Mrs. Haven is always quite careful in crossing the streets.

P. P. Scales, Inc., made no comment on the accident today. They said all they could say was they were very, very sorry it happened and hoped for the immediate recovery of Mrs. Haven.

PINEVILLE CHURCHES TO HOLD UNION SERVICES SUNDAY

PINEVILLE, Nov. 22.—The Christian Church, the Presbyterian Church and the two Methodist churches will hold a union service next Sunday evening at the Christian church. The Rev. R. M. Frakes of the Northern Methodist Church will preach and music will be furnished for the service by the combined choirs of the four churches.

This service is one of the union services which the pastors have arranged to be held regularly once a month.

OHIO FAMILY OF

Parents Sitting in Chairs, Children in Bed—Believe Medicine Caused Deaths.

By Associated Press
LANCASTER, O., Nov. 22.—Six members of the family of Irvine Henderson were found dead at their home here today. Death is believed to have resulted from the effects of some kind of medicine. The father and mother were found sitting upright in their chairs before the fire, and four children were found dead in bed. All were fully dressed. The children's ages range from seven years to eighteen months. The family moved here from Nelsonville, Ohio, three months ago. The father was employed as stationary engineer of the Pennsylvania railroad. Henderson was 32 years old.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The police escort assigned to Georges Clemenceau during his stay here was doubled this afternoon when Clemenceau received a letter threatening his life, signed "World War Veterans." The doughty old war pugler who came to America in an effort to strengthen ties between this country and France, treated the missive lightly. The letter read: "Don't you dare to say too much about our country and Germany. If you don't heed our advice you will hear bullets flying about your head. J. C. BURKE GETS NUGGETS
FROM HIS GOLD MINE

John C. Burke received a bag of gold nuggets from his gold mine in California this week. He is probably the only man in Middlesboro who had this particular luck, for while there are many who own mines few can produce the dust that caused the rush West in '49.

The nuggets Burke received weigh 1 3/4 ounces and are valued at $35. They were taken from the Ord Mountain forty miles east of Victorville, Calif. Gold nuggets from this mountain are valued from $3 to $75 per ton.

Mr. Burke says he and his partner took up 200 acres of land in this mountain twelve years ago with the intention of working it. Because of lack of finance they gave up the project for the time being. This caused his friends to think the mine worthless. Mr. Burke says Dr. J. D. Cary of Los Angeles was the partner.

The Mammoth Gold Ledge Mining Co., Inc., were incorporated and ten claims sold. As soon as proper arrangements can be made the company will take up the work of excavating the mine. A vein of gold extending from 3 to 8 feet out of the face of 200 acres.

A THOUGHT

How should one face a thousand and two put ten thousand to fight?—Democracy 32:30.

It ain't the guns nor armament, Nor funds that they can pay, But in the close co-operation that makes them win the day. It ain't the individuals, nor the army as a whole, But the everlasting teamwork Of every bloomin' soul.—Kipling.

THE FACTS ABOUT COAL

As there is begun in Washington, at the behest of the president and through his Post-Finding Commission, what really is a primary or rudimentary inquiry into the coal-producing and distributing agencies in the United States, the rather important discovery seems to have been made that, so far as definite public knowledge of the matter is concerned, there actually is none. Of course there exists, necessarily, in some quarters more, and in some less, than a superficial knowledge of related conditions and the influences which retard and hinder the uninterrupted flow of fuel from mines to jobbers and from jobbers to consumers. But there appear to be ramifications and confusions which thus far have made impossible that reasonable regulation, logically by the law of supply and demand, or of necessity by legislation and supervision, which would insure continued employment to the miners, a reasonably stable market to owners and producers, a steady tonnage to carriers, both rail and water, and an adequate supply to industries and domestic consumers.

It is conceded without argument or proof that there exists, so far as the present and the immediate future are concerned, an abundant and almost inexhaustible supply of coal, either anthracite, bituminous or other less adaptable varieties. It is also conceded that there is available almost continuously a sufficient man power to mine and prepare all needed coal for shipment and distribution and under normal conditions sufficient cars and motive power to transport to destination fuel sufficient to meet all reasonable requirements. And yet in the face of all these things it is the deplorable fact that at this moment there exists in the very places where fuel is most needed in the United States an abnormal and unexplainable shortage. This shortage is unexplainable because no one can state a reasonable excuse for its existence.

It is not too much to say that the final solution of this problem, and all great economic problems, rests with the people. Already it is too apparent that those who have only a selfish interest in the matter cannot or will not bring order out of chaos.

The clarifying process, while it may be difficult, need not necessarily be long. Some things are fundamentally wrong. This fact is apparent and is undeniable. The need is to discover what those things are, and this is the first duty of the investigators.—Christian Science Monitor.

MEN 40 OR MORE

Henry Ford speaking: "A man's career doesn't really begin until he is around 40. When he is 40 years old, a man has just about reached the age when he may begin to think seriously about making money."

Ford's idea is that the average man cannot expect to accumulate much of a fortune in the first 40 years of life, so those who have reached this age without much to show for it should not be discouraged.

Up to 40, as Ford sees it, a man's chief function in life is to gain experience. "He should be learning all he can, particularly HOW to spend money. As I told you two weeks ago, the best advice I can give to a young man anxious to succeed is: Spend your money—on yourself; get all the experience you can. Don't try to save money and be a miser."

Knowledge and experience are working capital to an individual, just as sure as money in the bank. With $10,000 and no experience, the average man going into business for himself is more apt to go broke than to make a success.

Knowledge and experience are even more important than money. To get them costs money.

Obviously, Ford is not suggesting that we go out and fling our money to the four winds. Observe that he says, spend it ON YOURSELF. What to buy? Good books, education, travel that brings knowledge.

Ford himself is 59. He was nearly 40 before he began giving much thought to building up a fortune. Previously to that, he had been busy—spending his money experimenting and increasing his fund of information.

He didn't spend on foolish amusement, billiards, baseball betting, rai-jack and clothes beyond his means. He invested his dollars in increasing his mechanical knowledge, in developing a definite campaign of action in a certain industry, and in acquiring the knowledge of human nature necessary to enable him to market his product, Ford cars.

Now he is "cashing in" on that early investment in himself. Indirectly he had always been saving and accumulating.

The thing to guard against is "spending on ourselves" in the wrong way.

SO THE OLD WORLD WAGS ALONG

Looking ahead to Thanksgiving Day, and back toward the election, we find ourselves puzzled and yet grateful.

After all the stormy partisanship, the belief that the fate of State or nation depended upon the election of one's own peerless choice, and the defeat of those who would tear the fair fabric, we do not see that anything millennial has happened. The world seems about the same, right here in our town, out through the State, and across the country. It is a bit more peaceful, that's about all—less interruption of personal tasks and home concerns.

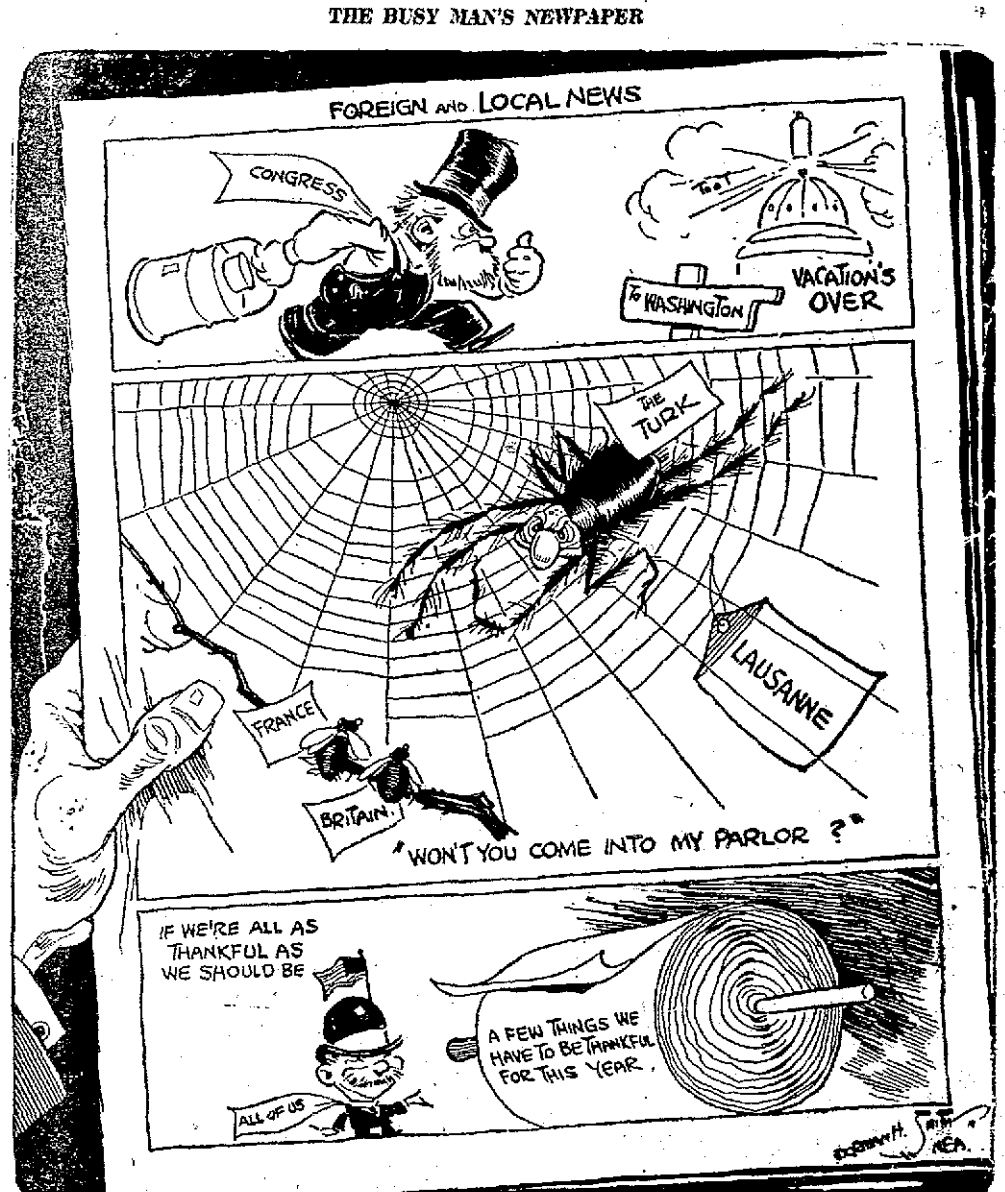

Indeed it is those very things that count most in the preservation of human institutions. Little lives with little daily virtues of industry, usefulness, honesty, faithfulness to neighbors, form a great invincible current that moves in its appointed course. It is little disturbed by flurries of elections, panics, crises of powers and principles. It is like the Gulf Stream, un-hasting, unretreating. It may be crossed; its surface may be lashed by storms; but it can't be stopped or its rate of flow affected one jot or tittle by man-made disturbances.

We need not despair if our own ideas do not win now. Man inches along in progress. If each of us is sound, wholesome in living and action, we can help a bit. We can stand for good ideas, good men, good measures, but continue cheerfully on our way if what we advocate does not at once succeed. We have an army of fellow citizens, most of them unseen, marching and fighting with us for the same

Tom Sims Says

What sounds worse than a phonograph almost run down? The report that Mr. Jack Dempsey offers to play the All-American football team is untrue.

THE OPEN FORUM

Editor Daily News: The article on the Red Cross in last night's paper disturbed me. Does that mean that Middleboro would lay down on such a vital matter as the Red Cross drive? I do not believe that can be.

The work of the Red Cross health nurse has meant more than any other one thing to this town and to the school. Some parents may be disgruntled because their children had to be vaccinated, or have some physical defect corrected, when these very things were for the good of that child and his associates. An intelligent person recognizes the importance of such work and all up-to-date schools have their health nurses. We are fortunate enough to have a nurse who combines health work in the school with health, work, charity investigation and innumerable other things outside the school.

If Middleboro citizens are falling down on their Red Cross subscriptions it is because they have not been solicited. I for one, have not but I intend to lose no time in getting my subscription in. If the Woman's Club has thrown over the job—though I feel there must be some mistake there, surely there are enough public-spirited women to undertake the canvass of the residence section as individuals working under the Red Cross executive committee and not dependent on their organization. If the committee of business men appointed to canvass the downtown section haven't time get some that have time, or will take time for such an important civic work.

Most of all, impress the situation as it now stands on the children in the school rooms. If they understand that they are in danger of losing the Red Cross they will talk up the matter at home and insure the subscription of their parents.

MODERATION

By Berton Braley

Safety First is well intended as a motto wise and splendid,
Only fools would wholly scorn it as they labor, day by day;
Watch Your Step is counsel wary which is highly necessary,
It will keep your feet from pitfalls that are found along the way.

Yet the life that's wholly stranger to the hue and zest of danger
Never knows the thrill of moving in the glamor of romance;
Keep your life-preserver ready and be cautious, cool and steady
But not so blundering cautious that you'll never take a chance!

It is fine to be a happy who is wide awake and snappy
And alert for opportunities that frequently occur,
And the vigorous Go-Getter will advance his purpose better
Than the loafer who's affected with the bookworm, as it were.

Yet there's naught more irritating than the bird who's operating
With an unremitting fervor and who's always on the run;
In a world where fate's capricious it is well to be ambitious,
But not so darned ambitious that you don't have any fun!

Deep Water

BY ZOE BECKLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Matrimony, after 19 years of married life, was a failure as far as ANITA, were concerned. Barrett, successful in business, finds the tedium of marriage intolerable and he leaves Anita to go to MYRA DELAY, a woman of the world. She reminds him of his responsibilities and her unwillingness to figure as correspondent in a divorce case. Barrett returns to talk the matter out with his wife. He tells her that in his home he had received no sympathy and no credit for his success in the world.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Anita Barrett had been listening to her husband with her back. Now she faced him, her tormented soul in her eyes.

"Yes, John—I know all the rest of it—that I take you for granted, that I have no interest in your work, that I'm wrapped up in my own affairs and the children, that I am cold and detached."

"Well, perhaps I am. But it's because I'm disgusted with your selfishness. Your self-centered conviction that you are the only member of the family with a grievance."

"I didn't say I was. I said I know I have my faults and failings, but I get only the discredit for them, never credit for them, never the credit a man who has made a success in life ought to—"

"Stop right there," she interrupted, her breath coming laborably as she strove for calm. "Does it ever occur to you that I had a share in that success? That because I patched and mended and scoured and scrubbed and walked miles to save a quarter on my marketing bills and set up fights with the babies and scribbled along with the doctor— Oh, I don't want your pity now!" she cried savagely as he made a movement.

"That ends it, then," said Barrett. "We're failed and we're got to face the inevitable. Goody." He turned swiftly and walked from the house.

"All I want is a little understanding—and I never get it. As soon as we began to prosper you immersed yourself body and soul in your business. You came home at night tired, I know. But so was I tired—dog tired. You expected me to be bright and entertaining and I was too fagged to know how to be. You wanted diversion and I had no diversion to give. You found me dull, and I found it hateful that you should find me dull."

"I didn't know how to be anything else—in those days. Later I learned that where men had clubs and interests and nice places to go, women had, too, if they wanted them. Clothes and a beautiful house helped fill a woman's time—if not her heart."

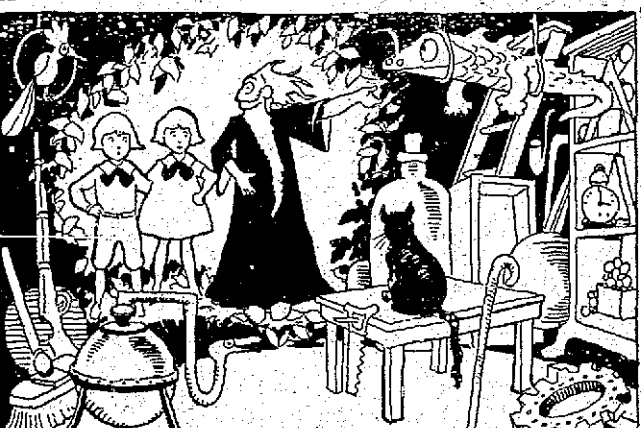

"I turned to these. The more money came to us, the more you plunged yourself into business. Many a time when I wanted tenderness, you turned from me unresponsively, your mind on other things. It chilled and angered me."

"I began to feel I was just the keeper of your house, the overseer of your children. I could no longer put my arms about you and woo your love. I couldn't. I felt like the woman scorned. I no longer attracted you, and because I sensed my shortcomings, I saw you were leaning toward—the Other Woman. Well—I will say it! Myra had not been worn out with poverty and weak and childbearing. She was free and fresh and young for all that her years are almost equal to mine. Well—I stopped, suddenly spent. 'Well, it's too late now. I am dead inside. I've schooled myself to coldness. I can't compete with the—Other Woman. If I could, I wouldn't.'"

"That ends it, then," said Barrett. "We're failed and we're got to face the inevitable. Goody." He turned swiftly and walked from the house. (To be Continued.)

It was a queer place and it seemed that everything in the world was there.

LETTER FROM TINGALING

Nancy and Nick followed Mr. Green Wizard over the tree tops to his work shop in the pine tree—up in the thickest, blackest part, where no mortal eye could see.

It was a queer place and it seemed that everything in the world was there.

In one corner of the room hung the Invisible Magic Sheet, in another stood the even Leagues Oars, in another was the Enchanted Bridge and in a fourth corner was a table on which stood the golden box containing the Wishing Ring.

In the center of the room was a great desk piled high with letters.

"Hum ho!" sighed the Green Wizard, hurrying over and picking up the top one. "More trouble, I see. I wonder who wants some magic now."

He opened the letter and read aloud:

"Dear Mr. Green Wizard:

"Could you, would you, please to send me a pair of magical glasses that can see through anything?"

"Sometimes when I go to collect my rent, the people of Whispering Forest, and Bright Meadow, and Old Orchard pretend they're not at home. Then, I have to go away without it. As the Fairy Queen needs all the rents she can get, will you please give me the glasses."

"Yours in need, 'Tinkle T. Tingaling."

"Oh, oh!" cried Nancy. "It's the fairy landlord!"

The Green Wizard smiled. "He has a kind heart so he shall have the glasses," he declared at once. (To Be Continued.)

The reason so many don't get ahead of the game is they don't play.

MOCK CHERRY PIE

By Bertha E. Shapleigh, of Columbia University

Line pie plate with a good crust, and fill with one cup cranberries cut in halves, one-half cup raisins seeded and cut in small pieces, one-half cup sugar and one tablespoon flour mixed. Dot over the top two teaspoons butter. Cover with a crust and bake until the crust is done and slightly brown.

PASTE FOR PIE

Into two cups of flour rub one-fourth cup of lard; add one-half teaspoon salt and moisten to a stiff dough with cold water, mixed with one tablespoon lemon juice. Into this dough cut one-half cup of butter, until butter is in very small pieces. Chill, roll out, fold, and repeat twice.

The Masquerader

To those whose sphere lies in the west of London, Fleet Street is little more than a name, and Clifford's Inn a mere dead letter. Yet Clifford's Inn lies as safely stowed away in the shadow of the Law Courts as any grave under a country church wall; it is as green of grass, as gray of stone, as irresponsible to the passing footsteps.

Facing the railroad in grass-plot of its little court stood the house in which John Loder had his rooms. Taken at a first glance, the house had the deserted air of an office, inhabited only in the early hours; but, as night fell, lights would be seen to show out, first on one floor, then on another—faint, human beacons unconsciously signalling each other. The rooms Loder inhabited were on the highest floor; and from their windows one might gaze philosophically on the tree tops, forgetting the uneven pavement and the worn railing that hemmed them round. In the landing outside the rooms his name appeared above his door, but the paint had been soiled by time, and the letters for the most part reduced to shadows; so that, taken in conjunction with the gaunt staircase and bare walls, the place had a cheerless look.

Inside, however, the effect was somewhat mitigated. The room on the right-hand, as one entered the small passage that served as hall, was of fair size, though low-ceiled. The paint of the wall-panelling, like the name above the outer door, had long ago been worn to a dirty and nondescript hue, and the floor was innocent of carpet; yet in the middle of the room stood a fine old Cromwell table, and on the plain deal book-shelves and along the mantel piece were some valuable books—political and historical. There were no curtains on the windows, and a common reading lamp with a green shade stood on a desk. It was the room of a man with few hobbies and no pleasures—who existed because he was alive, and worked because he must.

Three nights after the great fog John Loder sat by his desk in the light of the green-shaded lamp. The remains of a very frugal supper stood on the centre table, and in the grate a small and economical-looking fire was burning.

Having written for close on two hours, he pushed back his chair and stretched his cramped fingers; then he yawned, rose, and slowly walked across the room. Reaching the mantel-piece, he took a pipe from the pipe-rack and some tobacco from the jar that stood behind the books. His face looked tired and a little worn, as is common with men who have worked long at uncongenial tasks. Shredding the tobacco between his hands, he slowly filled the pipe, then lighted it from the fire with a spill of twisted paper.

Almost at the moment that he applied the light the sound of steps mounting the uncarpeted stairs outside caught his attention, and he raised his head to listen.

Presently the steps halted, and he heard a match struck. The stranger was evidently uncertain of his whereabouts. Then the steps moved forward again and paused.

An expression of surprise crossed Loder's face, and he laid down his pipe. As the visitor knocked, he walked quietly across the room and opened the door.

The passage outside was dark, and the new-comer drew back before the light from the room.

"Mr. Loder—?" he began, interrogatively. Then all at once he laughed in embarrassed apology. "Forgive me," he said. "The light rather dazzled me."

I didn't realize who it was."

Loder recognized the voice as belonging to his acquaintance of the fog.

"Oh, it's you!" he said. "Won't you come in?" His voice was a little cold. This sudden resurrection left him a little surprised—and not quite pleasantly surprised. He walked back to the fireplace, followed by his guest. The guest seemed nervous and agitated. "I must apologize for the hour of my visit," he said. "My—my time is not quite my own."

Loder waved his hand. "Whose time is his own?" he said.

Chilcote, encouraged by the remark, drew nearer the fire. Until this moment he had refrained from looking directly at his host; now, however, he raised his eyes, and, despite his preparation, he recoiled involuntarily before the extraordinary resemblance. Seen here, in the casual surroundings of a badly furnished and crudely lighted room, it was even more astounding than it had been in the mystery of the fog.

"Forgive me," he said again. "It is physical—purely physical. I am bowled over against my will."

Loder smiled. The slight contempt that Chilcote had first inspired rose again, and with a second feeling less easily defined. The man seemed so unstable, so incapable, yet so grotesquely suggestive to himself.

"The likeness is rather overwhelming," he said; "but not heavy enough to sink under. Come nearer the fire. What brought you here? Curiosity?" There was a wooden arm-chair by the fireplace. He indicated it with a wave of the hand, then turned and took up his smouldering pipe.

Chilcote, watching him furtively, obeyed the gesture and sat down.

"It is extraordinary!" he said, as if unable to dismiss the subject. "It—it is quite extraordinary!"

The other glanced round. "Let's drop it," he said. "It's so confoundedly obvious." Then his tone changed. "Won't you smoke?" he asked.

"Thanks," Chilcote began to fumble for his cigarettes.

But his host forestalled him. Taking a box from the mantel-piece, he held it out.

"My one extravagance!" he said, ironically. "My resources bind me to one; and I think I have made a wise selection. It's about the only vice we haven't to pay for about six times over." He glanced sharply at the face so absurdly like his own, then, lighting a fresh spill, offered his guest a light.

Chilcote moistened his cigarette and leaned forward. In the flare of the paper his face looked set, and anxious, but Loder saw that the lips did not twitch as they had done on the previous occasion that he had given him a light, and a look of comprehension crossed his eyes.

"What will you drink? Or, rather, will you have a whiskey? I keep nothing else. Hospitality is one of the debarred luxuries."

Chilcote shook his head. "I seldom drink. But don't let that deter you." Loder smiled. "I have one drink in the twenty-four hours—generally at two o'clock, when my night's work is done. A solitary man has to look where he is going."

"You work till two?"

Chilcote's eyes wandered to the desk.

"You write?" he asked.

The other nodded curtly.

"Books?" Chilcote's tone was anxious.

Loder laughed, and the bitter note showed in his voice.

"No—not books," he said.

Chilcote leaned back in his chair and passed his hand across his face.

The strong wave of satisfaction that the words woke in him was difficult to conceal.

"What is your work?"

CHANGE OF LIFE

Florida Lady Was in a Miserable Condition, But Says She Found Cardui Helpful, and Got Well.

Altha, Fla.—In explaining how she found Cardui so helpful during change of life, Mrs. Ella M. Bailey, of Route 2, this place, said:

"I became so weakened it was an effort for me to get around. I knew what was the matter, but I felt like I couldn't give up."

"I just dragged, and I certainly was nervous. I was so restless I could not sit down long—yet so weak I couldn't get about. It is a most miserable and such a helpless feeling."

"I would get depressed and out of heart."

"I began to feel, after awhile, there was no use to try to get well. This is all wrong, for it makes a person worse."

"I had heard of Cardui, and thought it might strengthen me. A neighbor had used it with good results."

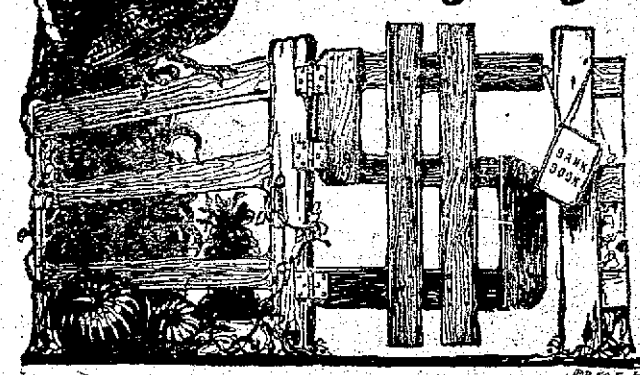

"I took one bottle (of Cardui), then I saw I wasn't so nervous, so kept it up."

"Gradually the nervousness left me. I began to eat and sleep better. Was soon well, and all right. Cardui did wonders for me, and I certainly do recommend it."

Thousands of other women have written, to tell of the beneficial results obtained by taking Cardui, and to recommend it to others.

DODGE BROTHERS SEDAN

Many who could well afford more expensive cars are showing a marked preference for Dodge Brothers Sedan.

They find it easy to drive, economical to run, and comparable in beauty and elegance with cars much higher in price.

In the vast amplitude of Dodge Brothers closed body plant, this sedan is constructed with all the studious precision that marks the work of the finest custom builders.

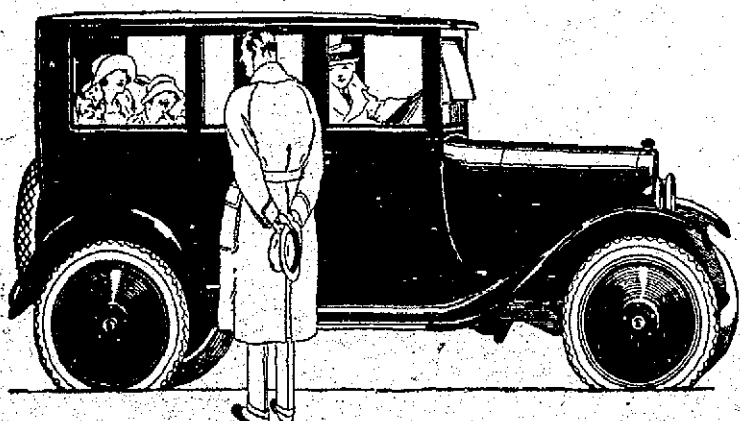

Eighteen days are devoted alone to the 18 rubbing and varnishing operations which are responsible for the unusual brilliancy of its lustre.

Months of seasoning precede the use of the fine, critically selected ash which gives the body its rugged firmness.

The interior fittings, too, are chosen with thoughtfulness and rare good taste. The upholstery is covered with genuine mohair velvet of a singularly rich and beautiful pattern. The seats are roomy and luxurious.

Steel disc wheels (with cord tires) harmonize in a most effective way with the new grace and smartness which Dodge Brothers have recently brought to the lines of the body.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Preventable Accidents

The following terse statement made by an eminent railroad authority is printed as a part of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad's campaign of information about railroads, their operation and their problems.

"Nobody was ever struck by a railway engine except on a railway track, or, at any rate, so near to it that he or she was on its preserve. Between the rails of a railroad there are, ordinarily, just four feet eight inches and a half, and the balance of the unsafe space does not exceed three feet—yet with all the rest of the world to stand and walk on, some eleven thousand people find it necessary to end their days, or their health, on this narrow strip of land."

Remember that railroads, while employing every safety-first prevention and constantly cautioning their employees against carelessness, must have your thoughtful co-operation in the prevention of accidents.

Stop—Look—and Listen at railroad crossings—and stay off railroad tracks.
